Speaker: James B. Stenson

Topic: "Leadership in the Workplace and Society"

Biographical info and photo come from www.ParentLeadership.com

James Stenson works as an educational consultant specializing in family life and family-school relationships. He has given numerous conferences throughout the United States and the world on the Parent Leadership and has authored numerous books including: Compass: A Handbook on Parent Leadership, Lifeline: The Religious Upbringing of Your Children and Father, the Family Protector.

As an educator for 21 years, he worked to help establish two secondary schools for boys. The Heights School in Washington, DC and Northridge Preparatory School in Chicago. At Northridge, he served as headmaster for almost twelve years. As a result, many excellent young adults have been able to bring honor to their families through their strong character and right living. It was during this time, he was able get to know hundreds of families intimately, study their family up close and watch children grow into maturity. Stenson looked for patterns of family life among those people who eventually triumphed with their children. Finding their commonalities, how they stayed on track, what worked and most importantly what could other parents learn from their experience.

His books and teachings are used to help parents learn from the experience of others and to think deeply about their job as a parent. His belief is that busy parents today need to think carefully about what they're doing to raise their children well and only have one chance to raise their children right.
